

The Wedding Invitations

Two different types of wedding invitation; the traditional and church. The client didn't know what they wanted to begin with but after the initial consultation and after some concept sketches were done up for them to consider. Below are the ones they liked best.

Traditional wedding Invitation

The idea of this design is to incorporate the different elements that the couple think would be considered traditional in their culture. In this case it was the dirt road in the background palm tree, calabash, kongo drums and finally the couple in their traditional outfit.

The font we used makes the text looks hand written.

Church wedding Invitation

utilising what the client provided to make something beautiful as seen above. In this case, the client provided pictures of their casual photograph to be used in this design.

Suggestions were given to have a white church on the corner since it was a church wedding. The lady wanted red roses, so a bouquet of red roses have been placed on the bottom right hand side of this elegant looking invitation.

Even the text it self is a piece of art work; beautiful and delicate.
